About This Trip •

The region of Jammu and Kashmir, before 1947, spanned an impressive 86,024 square miles, stretching from latitudes 32° 78' to 36° 58' N and longitudes 73° 27' to 80° 72' E. This vast territory encompassed not only the Jammu region but also Ladakh, Gilgit, Hunza, Nagar, Puniyal, and Yasin. Furthermore, the tiny State of Chitral, located northwest of Gilgit, was historically a tributary to the ruler of Kashmir. The present shape of the State owes much to Maharaja Gulab Singh Ji, the founder of the Dogra Hindu dynasty in Kashmir, whose efforts in the second half of the 19th century consolidated these regions into a single dominion.

Historical Overview of Kashmir (Before 1947)

Nestled amidst the grandeur of the Himalayas, Kashmir is often hailed as one of the most beautiful places on Earth. Unlike much of India, Kashmir has a recorded history that extends far into the past, in contrast to Alberuni's observation in the 11th century that Indians generally lacked a sense of historical record. Kashmir also boasts a legacy of distinguished historians, including Kalhana, author of the Rajatarangini, and Bilhana, a Sanskrit scholar who composed the Vikramankadeva-charity in honour of King Vikramaditya VI of Kalyana.

The name "Kashmir" is said to derive from "Ka" (water) and "Shimir" (to desiccate), referencing a tradition that the region was once a lake drained by the ancient saint Kashyap. Historically, it became part of the Mauryan Empire under Ashoka, who founded Srinagar around 250 BCE. Buddhism flourished in the region during this period, particularly under the Kushans. The third Buddhist council was held in Kashmir during Kanishka's reign, corroborated by the accounts of the Chinese traveller Hien Tsang in the 7th century CE. Despite Buddhism's influence, Hinduism remained the dominant religion.

Dynastic Eras

In the 7th century CE, the Karkota dynasty, established by Durlabhavardhana, rose to prominence. Lalitaditya Muktapida, a notable ruler of this dynasty, constructed the renowned Martand Sun Temple. The Karkotas dynasty succeeded the Utpala dynasty in 855 CE, under which Avanti Verman restored political and economic stability to Kashmir. Queen Didda, a widow of the Gupta lineage, ruled effectively until 1003 CE despite her controversial personal life, paving the way for the Lohara dynasty.

Udyan Dev was the final Hindu monarch of Kashmir, but his actual power largely rested with his queen, Kota Rani, who effectively governed as the de facto ruler. Known for her bravery and political acumen, her death in 1339 marked the end of Hindu rule and the establishment of Muslim dominance in Kashmir under the Sultanate of Shams-ud-Din, which ruled for 222 years. Sultan Zain-ul-Abidin, a prominent figure of this era, presided over a cultural and political renaissance in the region.

Kashmir Under Foreign Rule

Kashmir was annexed into the Mughal Empire in 1586, ending its independence. Later, in 1757, the region came under the control of Ahmed Shah Durrani, an Afghan ruler. In 1819, Ranjit Singh integrated Kashmir into his Sikh Empire. However, following the Anglo-Sikh wars, British forces assumed control and, under the Treaty of Amritsar, sold Kashmir to Gulab Singh for 75 lakh rupees. This transaction granted Gulab Singh full authority over the region, which he expanded by annexing Ladakh. His successors included Maharaja Ranbir Singh (1857-1885), Maharaja Partab Singh (1885-1925), and Maharaja Hari Singh, who ruled from 1925 until 1950.

Political Awakening

In 1932, Sheikh Abdullah founded Kashmir's first political party, the All Jammu & Kashmir Muslim Conference, later renamed the National Conference in 1939. This party remains a significant political entity in modern-day Kashmir.

The History of Kashmir Post-1947

After India gained independence in 1947, Maharaja Hari Singh, the ruler of Jammu and Kashmir, opted to remain neutral, neither joining India nor Pakistan. However, when Pakistani forces invaded the region in 1948, the Maharaja sought India's military aid. In return, he signed the Instrument of Accession, formally merging Kashmir with the Indian Union and integrating Kashmir into the Indian Union. Indian troops intervened, and fighting ceased in 1949 following a United Nations-mediated truce. This agreement established the first Line of Control (LoC), which divided the territory between India and Pakistan.

By 1956, Jammu and Kashmir became an official part of India under a newly framed Constitution. However, areas captured by Pakistan during the 1948 conflict, known as Azad Kashmir, remained under its control. The situation grew more complex in 1959 when China occupied the Aksai Chin region of Ladakh. The situation intensified in 1963 when Pakistan and China reached a border agreement under which Pakistan handed over portions of territory claimed by India to China.

In 1965, India and Pakistan clashed over Kashmir once more, but the hostilities were brought to a halt through a United Nations-mediated ceasefire. The following year, Indian Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri and Pakistani President Ayub Khan signed the Tashkent Agreement, committing to a peaceful resolution of the conflict. However, in 1971, another war erupted, this time triggered by the independence movement in East Pakistan. With India's support, East Pakistan became Bangladesh. This war concluded with the Shimla Agreement of 1972, where Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and Pakistani President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto agreed to settle disputes bilaterally.

During the 1970s and early 1980s, Kashmir experienced a boom in tourism, attracting visitors from across the globe to its breathtaking scenery and rich cultural heritage. However, this period of peace ended in the late 1980s and 1990s, when separatist militancy and terrorism surged in the region. Armed insurgents and foreign militants caused widespread violence, leading to significant casualties and the displacement of many Kashmiri families.

In recent years, efforts have been made to foster dialogue between India and Pakistan to resolve enduring issues. These initiatives bring hope for lasting peace in Jammu and Kashmir. As stability gradually returns, the region's allure—its beautiful gardens, tranquil meadows, towering mountains, and vibrant cultural sites—might again draw tourists worldwide.

How to Reach Srinagar

By Air: Sheikh ul Alam Airport (IATA: SXR) serves Srinagar. It offers regular flights connecting the city to major destinations such as Delhi, Mumbai, and Chandigarh. The airport is conveniently located just 15 km from the city centre.

Nearest Airport: Sheikh ul Alam Airport, Srinagar

By Train:

To reach Srinagar by train, travellers must first reach Banihal Railway Station. From there, they can hire a taxi or a cab for the onward journey.

By Road:

Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir, is well-connected by road to several key cities, including Delhi (876 km), Chandigarh (646 km), Leh (424 km), and Jammu (258 km). Regular buses and taxis make it easy to reach Srinagar.

Shikara Ride on Dal Lake, Kashmir

A Shikara ride on Dal Lake in Kashmir offers a peaceful journey combining stunning natural beauty and cultural significance. As you glide through the calm waters in a beautifully crafted wooden boat, you'll be captivated by the reflections of the Pir Panjal mountains, the unique houseboats, and the lively surroundings. The experience offers a glimpse into Kashmir's rich traditions, and the boats showcase the region's exquisite craftsmanship and heritage.

Best Time to Visit:

- Autumn (September-November): The landscape is bathed in golden tones, with tranquil lakes and clear skies providing a serene atmosphere.
- Summer (June): A lively time marked by blooming flowers and pleasant weather, though it also attracts many tourists.

Gulmarg: The Meadow of Flowers

In the heart of the stunning Himalayan range, Gulmarg, which translates to "Meadow of Flowers," is a picturesque hill station around 60 kilometres from Srinagar. The drive takes about an hour and a half and offers panoramic views. Known for its lush meadows and snow-covered mountains, Gulmarg has always been a favourite destination for travellers.

Main Attractions

A significant highlight of Gulmarg is the Gulmarg Gondola, one of the world's highest cable cars. The ride is divided into two phases:

- Phase 1: Takes visitors to Kongdori Station, situated at 8,530 feet.
- Phase 2: The trail continues to Apharwat Peak, which rises to 12,293 feet and offers breathtaking panoramic views of the mountains.

Tourists can also explore the enchanting Strawberry Valley, the rugged terrain of Leopards Valley, and the peaceful Al-Pathar Lake, a stunning frozen lake accessible by horseback or a trek from Kongdori.

In winter, Gulmarg transforms into a snow-covered paradise, attracting skiing enthusiasts to its pristine slopes. The location is ideal for experienced skiers looking for a thrilling challenge. The festive atmosphere during this time, including events like White Christmas and vibrant New Year celebrations, adds to the destination's charm.

Historical Background

Gulmarg is rich in history. It once served as a retreat for royalty like Yousuf Shah Chak and Emperor Jahangir. Initially known as Gaurimarg, named after Goddess Parvati (consort of Lord Shiva), Yousuf Shah Chak later renamed the area Gulmarg, meaning "the place of roses. "

In the early 20th century, the renowned explorer Sir Marc Aurel Stein often visited Gulmarg to rest between his Central Asian expeditions. It became a popular summer destination for British officers and their families during British rule.

How to Reach Gulmarg

- By Air: The closest airport is Sheikh Ul Alam International Airport in Srinagar, 54 kilometres from Gulmarg.
- By Train: The nearest railway station is in Anantnag, about 45 kilometres away.
- By Road:
 - From Jammu: Approximately 410 kilometres.
 - From Srinagar: A 54-kilometre drive.
 - From Baramulla: Just 54 kilometres by road.

Apharwat Peak

Situated 4,200 meters (14,000 feet) above sea level, Apharwat Peak is one of the most striking attractions in Gulmarg. Located near the Line of Control with Pakistan, it offers stunning panoramic views and remains snow-covered for much of the year. This peak is the centre of several winter sports activities in Gulmarg, particularly skiing.

The beauty of Apharwat is genuinely exceptional. Surrounded by vast snowy meadows and towering, snow-capped mountains, its remote location near the Line of Control enhances its appeal. The peak is a popular destination for honeymooners and thrill-seekers, attracting visitors seeking exhilarating winter sports in one of Kashmir's most beautiful settings.

Apharwat is approximately 13 kilometres from Gulmarg, and the most convenient way to reach it is by taking the Gondola cable car. The Gondola operates in two phases:

- Phase 1: From Gulmarg to Kongdori
- Phase 2: From Kongdori to Apharwat

Visitors can also use human sledges to explore the slopes further.

Key Highlights:

- Apharwat Peak is 14,500 feet above sea level, making it a prime tourist spot.
- Located 13 kilometres from Gulmarg, the easiest way to reach Apharwat is by the Gondola cable car.
- The Gondola ride has two phases: Gulmarg to Kongdori and Kongdori to Apharwat. Tickets are available online or on-site.
- Weather conditions can sometimes affect access to the peak, and extreme weather may prevent the Gondola from operating on certain days.
- The Line of Control is just a few kilometres from Apharwat, and visitors can explore the slopes further using human sledges.

Alpather Lake

Nestled between towering mountains and lush green meadows blanketed with wildflowers, Alpather Lake in Gulmarg is a mesmerising destination. The lake remains frozen for most of the year, and even by mid-June, it often still shows signs of ice. From May to September, the lake unveils its clear blue waters, though white icebergs can still be spotted floating on its surface for much of the year.

What makes Alpather Lake truly special is its stunning backdrop. Located about 13 kilometres from the main town of Gulmarg, it draws both locals and tourists, especially on pleasant days when it becomes a popular picnic spot. Whether frozen or thawed, the lake is framed by towering, snow-capped peaks, creating a perfect setting for photographs. The sight of a snow-covered landscape with patches of green peeking through is especially magical during the winter months. The frozen lake is genuinely awe-inspiring for those who have never experienced snow.

Things to Do at Alpather Lake:

1. Trekking is a popular activity near Alpather Lake. It covers approximately 14 kilometres of rugged terrain. This trek is quite challenging and unsuitable for beginners, so it's recommended that you go with a guide.
2. If you bring your ice skating gear in winter, you can take full advantage of the frozen lake.

The ice on Alpathar Lake creates an excellent skating surface, offering a unique experience surrounded by breathtaking views. Beginners will also find it an exciting place to learn skating in such a picturesque setting, with the added support of a guide or companion.

3. Alpathar Lake is conveniently located close to Gulmarg, so it can easily be included in your sightseeing itinerary. Almost every local is familiar with the location, making it easy to access. Many visitors come to Gulmarg specifically to experience its snowy beauty, and a visit to Alpathar Lake during winter provides the perfect opportunity to walk on a frozen lake – an experience not often found elsewhere.

Summer Activities in Kashmir

During the summer, Gulmarg becomes a vibrant hub, offering a variety of activities for visitors to enjoy. Whether it's a scenic ride on the Gondola or trekking through the stunning landscapes of Kashmir, there's something for everyone. The local festivals provide a chance to experience the region's traditional crafts and music, while the bustling markets are perfect for picking up unique, handmade souvenirs. Visitors can also unwind by the crystal-clear lakes or have a relaxing picnic in the serene natural surroundings.

Summer Culinary Delights

Try a refreshing Kashmiri Kahwa, a fragrant green tea infused with saffron, almonds, and cardamom to cool off. On warm summer evenings, enjoy a savoury treat: Chaman, fried cottage cheese cubes cooked in a rich curry sauce and served with rice or chapati.

Autumn: The Golden Season (September to November)

From September to November, Kashmir is transformed into a golden wonderland. In the local language, autumn is known as Harud. During this time, trees shed their leaves, turning the valley into a breathtakingly picturesque landscape. With temperatures ranging from 9°C to 23°C, this season offers the perfect climate for sightseeing and outdoor activities.

Autumn Activities in Kashmir

Autumn is an ideal time to visit apple orchards and join locals in picking fresh apples. The Saffron Festival in Pampore is another highlight, where you can witness the beautiful saffron blooms and learn about the local farming traditions. The stunning autumn foliage also creates excellent photography opportunities and leisurely drives around the valley.

Autumn Culinary Delights

Try Gushtaba, a creamy meatball curry perfect for cooler autumn weather. These rich and warming dishes are also popular. Another popular dish is Kahwa Kebab, tender meat grilled with aromatic spices. It is often paired with fresh fruits for a satisfying meal.

Winter: A Snowy Wonderland (December to February)

From December to February, Kashmir's winter becomes a snowy retreat, attracting snow lovers and adventure enthusiasts. The region becomes a winter wonderland, with temperatures ranging from -2°C to 12°C. Gulmarg is particularly popular during this time for winter sports like skiing and snowboarding, drawing visitors from across the globe.

Winter Activities in Kashmir

Winter is the season to embrace Kashmir's snowy beauty. Try snowshoeing through the snow-covered landscapes or riding a horse-drawn sleigh. Gulmarg offers thrilling skiing opportunities, while the peaceful valleys provide an idyllic winter escape for those seeking tranquillity.

Famous Dishes of Kashmir and Ladakh Influenced by diverse cultures, Kashmiri cuisine offers a rich array of flavorful dishes.

Here are some must-try dishes:

Rogan Josh: A spicy lamb dish with yoghurt and browned onions, a Mughal legacy.

Modur Pulav: Sweet rice with saffron, milk, ghee, and dry fruits.

Matschgand: Spicy minced meatballs cooked in red gravy.

Yakhni: Lamb cooked in yoghurt with aromatic spices.
