About This Trip •

Kedarkantha, not to be confused with the famed Kedarnath Temple, takes you deep into the heart of Uttarakhand's Govind Pashu Vihar National Park. This trek is among the most iconic in India, loved equally by seasoned adventurers and first-time trekkers. But what truly makes Kedarkantha stand out? A few unforgettable experiences, the summit climb being the crown jewel.

Reaching the summit is a challenging yet deeply rewarding feat. The trail starts in the early hours of the morning, climbing steeply and steadily towards the peak. As you ascend, you're enveloped by the grandeur of the upper Himalayas, which stay with you every step of the way. The final stretch to the summit is tough, but the 360-degree view from the top and the feeling of achievement more than make up for it. This is what makes Kedarkantha an ideal introductory summit climb for beginners.

But the trek is more than just the summit.

Clearings that Tell Stories

Another unique feature of Kedarkantha is its scenic forest clearings. Few treks in the Himalayas offer such beautifully spaced open patches along the trail. These clearings not only serve as perfect rest stops and campsites but also open up panoramic views at just the right moments, adding magic to your journey.

Forests that Enchant

Kedarkantha is also renowned for its dense, diverse forests. Each trail winds through stunning wooded sections that shift in character and colour as you climb higher. Don't be surprised if you find yourself completely immersed and perhaps a little lost in the captivating beauty of these woods (in the best way possible).

Best Time to Visit Kedarkantha

One of the few Himalayan treks accessible almost year-round, Kedarkantha is open 10 months of the year, barring July and August (peak monsoon). Each season brings its charm, challenges, and character:

Winter (December to February)

- Fresh snowfall and snow-covered landscapes
- Majestic frozen forests and meadows
- A tough but unforgettable summit push
- Cold mornings and freezing evenings

Spring (March and April)

- Lingering snow with blooming forests
- Vibrant green meadows and clear skies
- Pleasant mornings, chilly nights

Summer (May and June)

- No snow, but plenty of natural beauty
- Golden meadows and lush forests
- Hot days, cool nights
- Light rain towards late May

Autumn (Mid-September to November)

- Clear skies and crisp views
- Colourful foliage and fresh mountain air
- Mild days, freezing nights
- Occasional rain until late September

Connectivity: Off the Grid

The trek begins in Sankri, a remote yet charming village located within Govind National Park. Once you enter the park, mobile signals start to fade, and by the time you reach Sankri, consider yourself officially unplugged.

While some landline connections may exist in local shops, don't count on them. Networks like BSNL, Airtel, Idea, and even Jio are essentially non-functional here. The last reliable mobile coverage is in Dehradun or Mussoorie, so make your calls before reaching Sankri.

ATM Availability: Withdraw Early

There are no ATMs in Sankri or anywhere along the Kedarkantha route. The final ATM stop is Purola, so be sure to withdraw sufficient cash before proceeding. Having cash on hand is essential for making basic purchases, addressing emergencies, and ensuring smooth logistics for trekking.

Things to Do on the Kedarkantha Trek

- Cross your first re-entrant (natural water channel between hill spurs)
- Pitch a tent beside the enchanting Juda Ka Talab
- Trek through snow using microspikes
- Begin your Summit Day at dawn for the most magical views
- Slide down snowy slopes
- Build a snowman (because why not?)

- Immerse yourself in local culture at Sankri.

Q: Can I do the Kedarkantha Trek on my own?

A:

Attempt any trek in the Himalayas only when you are fully confident and prepared. Don't rely solely on blogs or videos to gauge your readiness. Gathering information is helpful, but actually reaching the destination and navigating the trail are entirely different challenges.

Q: What is the History and Mystery of Kedarkantha?

A:

According to Hindu mythology, after the Kurukshetra war, the Pandavas sought Lord Shiva in Varanasi to atone for their sins. However, Shiva, angered by the war and its deceit, refused to meet them and disguised himself as a bull (Nandi), fleeing to the Garhwal Himalayas. Unable to find him in Varanasi, the Pandavas pursued him to the mountains, where Bheema recognized the bull as Lord Shiva. Grasping it, he would not let go, and in the ensuing struggle, the bull broke into five parts. These became the five sacred sites known as Panch Kedar: Kedarnath (Lord Shiva's back), Tungnath (arms), Rudranath (face), Madhyamaheshwar (navel), and Kalpeshwar (hair). Today, a small temple dedicated to Lord Shiva stands at the summit.
